

The first train over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul branch reached Appleton Monday night and the regular schedule was resumed Tuesday, Agent A. W. Lesc announced. The first freight shipment also came in during the night.

AMATEURS SCORE SPLENDID HIT IN MUSICAL REVUE

Town Topics is Presented to Large Audience in Professional Manner

Appleton young people outdid themselves in amateur acting and dancing at Appleton theatre on Monday evening when they put on "Town Topics" for the benefit of the Appleton Women's club under the direction of W. Frederic Marlatt. From beginning to end, the production was entertaining and some of the numbers—especially "Cub" Buck as a headliner—were nothing less than "side splitting".

When each episode was produced with great success, it is hard to point to any one number and say it was best. "Cub" Buck brought down the house when he appeared in "The Apple Oats" in a skit entitled "The Apostles of Pop". Mr. Buck was a bathing beauty of no small dimensions and took the part nobly until he got excited in the heat of the performance and pulled his veil off. The audience laughed so long and so loudly that the lines of the skit were delayed some time. Mr. Oaks, who has come to Appleton from the professional stage was an able partner for Cub, but they say that no amount of coaching will make Cub shake a shimmy.

SPLENDID COMEDY

"Wherein a Plot Begins and Ends", in which some of Appleton's most talented amateur actors took part, was really a splendidly acted one act comedy. Miss Ruth McKenna was the bride of a few minutes who had married the wrong man, much to the dismay of her aunt, Mrs. Mabel Shaw. For Fudge, the prince-bridegroom finds that he has much too much honeymoon when his twin soul, Mrs. John Engle, Jr., is asked by his wife to accompany them. "Punk" McGlynn, whom the bride remembers as slim, eager and with white lilacs in his hand has complicated things by getting measling drunk. He is the bride's twin soul, but Mrs. Buckman is his chorus girl fiancée. Mrs. Joseph Koffend, Jr., as Jane, private secretary to the chorus girl, is one of the funniest characters of the skit. Charles Holmes is the butler and came in for his share of laughter from fraternity brothers who occupied a box.

Every chorus number in the entire production was good and repeated attempts on the part of the audience to have encore numbers failed. Because encores drag the performance, no curtain calls are taken by choruses of Mr. Marlatt's production. Characteristics of the production which would merit great praise are the promptness with which the curtain was rung up on the opening number and the rapidity with which one episode followed the other. There were no long waits and tiresome interruptions.

ONE ACT OMITTED

The act in which Mr. Marlatt was to appear with two Oshkosh dancers had to be omitted because of the illness of one of the Oshkosh girls. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Oaks appeared in a musical skit entitled "Smart Stuff". It was an act which the young couple have been putting on in vaudeville before coming to Appleton to go into business and was full of witty song and talk. Both are good entertainers. Little Miss Virginia Oaks, their daughter also appeared in a dance number. Another of the youngest belles was Miss Jean Shannon who appeared in Armistice day. Another of the comedy numbers was the "Outatune Quartette" featuring Harold McGillan, Harry Willson, Paul Cary and Jack Markham as the village songbirds. On key and off key, they were entertaining and their makeup was decidedly effective. Among the chorus numbers which took the best with the audience were "Nobody's Baby" and "I'll Say I Love you," both led by Dorothy Peterson. My Holiday Girls with Harold McGillan as soloist, Dorothy Peterson, Henry Willson as soloist. The Polly and song which included a group of high school girls led by Marjorie Davis was very good. Miss Davis is new as a chorus leader, but she took the part of the little "glad girl" well.

FINE DANCE NUMBERS

Mrs. Eleanor Mehl Berger sang an Egyptian love song. Among the solo dance numbers was a Dance Egyptianienne by Dorothy Adst and a Shalov dance by Lillian. Tomahawk. When speaking of the production here, Mr. Marlatt said that taking the entire revue into consideration the Appleton players put on the best show he has had this year.

Many others deserve mention including Leslie Buchanan and Miss Estelle Leslie Buchanan and Miss Lescope which made the revue possible. All those who danced in the chorus numbers added to the success of the performance. The stage settings and drops were artistic.

THE STAGE

"Peacock Alley"

With Mae Murray in the stellar role "Peacock Alley" which opens a four days' engagement at the Appleton theatre with Wednesday matinee promises to be one of the season's most elaborate productions. It unfolds a story of a Parisian dancer who meets with various adventures in her beloved Montmartre and in New York and gives Miss Murray real opportunity for telling emotional work. A carefully chosen cast lends support.

The presentation will be along the usual Fischer lines with prologue, specialty dancer, short subjects, lighting effects. Miss Dorothy Day, former pipe organist at the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, becomes organist at the Appleton starting with "Peacock Alley."

COMPLETE PLANS FOR BIG WEDDING

Yeomen Plan Novel Feature for Twenty-fifth Anniversary
Party

Prof. E. T. Prim, Lawrence college, and Andrew Landgraf of the Minnebaha homestead, Minneapolis, will be among the speakers at the silver jubilee banquet of Homestead No. 6004, Brotherhood of American Yeomen to be given in Odd Fellow hall Tuesday evening. Other speakers previously announced will include Elmer Smith, Oshkosh, state manager of the brotherhood, Dr. Edward F. Mielke, homestead physician of Appleton and other prominent physicians. Music during the banquet and for dancing afterwards, will be furnished by the Lyric orchestra.

The Rev. Ernest L. Wright will join in the bonds of matrimony the young couple who agreed to take the solemn vows "for better or for worse" during the banquet before 100 persons who are expected to attend. Deep mystery shrouds the identity of the young couple, and no small dimension of the committee to reveal the mystery. The event was planned following a desire to have something unusual that will live long in the memories of the members of the homestead.

Serving of the banquet will begin promptly at 7 o'clock. Immediately after the banquet the marriage will take place. Elaborate decorations have been arranged especially for the wedding and a pretty reception will be given in honor of the bridegroom and his bride.

GREENVILLE MAY HAVE NEW MEETING

One Day Institute May Take Place of Program Annuled
by Storm

Plans for a "peppery" one-day farmers' meeting in the place of the two days institute which was scheduled to be held at Greenville last week but which could not be held because of the storm, are now being considered.

The exact date of this one-day meeting will be announced soon, probably either for the last part of this week or the first of next. Paul Kyhus, farm agent for the First National Bank, now is making arrangements with institute conductors at Madison for the purpose of having a few good speakers here on whatever day is agreed upon.

The plan is to condense the original program, covering poultry, hogs, alfalfa and dairy cattle so that the farmers will get the maximum benefit from a one-day meeting in place of the two-day event which was annulled.

OFFER PRAYER TO FIND VOICATIONS FOR YOUNG

A 9-days novena will start at St. Joseph church Friday, March 3, during which special services will be held. The main purpose is to offer prayer and give instructions to young people in their choice of vocation or life work.

A mission particularly for young men and young women will be held at St. Joseph church from March 19 to March 26. A sermon will be delivered at 7:30 each evening by Father Camillus.

WAITES SEEKS PLACE ON APPLETON COUNCIL

J. M. Waites will oppose A. W. Laabs for reelection to the common council from the Third ward. Waites has filed his nominating petition with E. L. Williams, city clerk.

Invitation to Luncheon. Invitations were sent out Monday by the Rotary club for the luncheon next Tuesday at the Sherman house which will be addressed by Colvin B. Brown, chief of the organization bureau of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The sister superior of the Greenville parochial school was taken to St. Elizabeth hospital Monday when she became seriously ill.

RAIL SHOVELERS WORK ALL NIGHT TO OPEN TRACKS

Crew of 300 Men Sent to Oshkosh to Open Tracks to Northern Hospital

The state hospital near Oshkosh, which is practically out of fuel, sent a S. O. S. call to H. J. Andersen, roadmaster of the Northern Wisconsin division of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Co., at Appleton Monday. Mr. Andersen, with 200 men from Chicago, was removing the ice from side tracks of the railroad yards at the time he received the message and expected to transport his men to the state institution during the night and be ready for work at daylight Tuesday morning.

The hospital had 11 carloads of coal sidetracked some distance from the institution, but was unable to have them unloaded until the ice was removed from the track. With 200 men from Chicago and 100 more from the vicinity of Appleton Junction, Mr. Andersen expected to relieve the situation by Tuesday night.

WORKED ALL NIGHT

The roadmaster, who resides at Fond du Lac, said he left that city early Thursday morning with an engine crew, snow plow and force of shovelers and was delayed nearly a dozen times before reaching Neenah at 11 o'clock that night. His men worked all night in that city and at 7:30 Friday morning left for Appleton Junction and the wreck at Little Chute which he reached shortly before 12 o'clock Friday night.

At Little Chute he met a wrecking crew from Green Bay and another from Milwaukee and after he and his men put in another all night session they returned to Appleton Junction and have been working in this vicinity ever since.

Many of the Chicago men left home with insufficient clothing and have suffered quite a little from the cold. Some of them have gunny sacks wrapped around their feet. All wear a tag in their caps on which appears the word "shovelers" and the wearers' number. They are boarded and lodged in box cars fitted expressly for that purpose.

That Appleton Junction was one of the most important railroad centers in the storm zone was evidenced by the fact that Fred Hammill, general superintendent, and E. E. Terpin, assistant general superintendent, of Chicago gave personal supervision to the work of restoring train service at that point.

John Hoffman, a train dispatcher of Fond du Lac arrived at Appleton Junction shortly after the storm and dispatched trains between that point and Green Bay on the only available wire. After being on continuous duty for nearly 48 hours he was relieved by Al Ranson.

Hit By Falling Ice. Daniel Devine of Center was badly cut on the neck Monday when a huge chunk of ice fell on him while he was working about his windmill. The ice became detached from the windmill tower and fell with such a force that it knocked Mr. Devine to the ground.

THOUSANDS POUR INTO TREASURY

City Treasurer Expects Very Few Delinquents Will be

City taxes will be due at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and after that hour taxpayers will be required to pay a 2 per cent penalty. Fred Bachman, city treasurer, says he will not be able to finish checking up on the tax list for several days.

Mr. Bachman and his assistants worked all day Sunday and until 12 o'clock Monday night opening mail containing checks from tax payers but a large pile of letters remains unopened. The cleanup of the railroads last week prevented mail from being delivered and hundreds of letters reached the city treasurer's office Sunday and Monday.

Tax payers thronged the treasurer's office Tuesday. More than 30 persons were in line when the office opened at 9 o'clock and as they were waited on others came to take their places. The phones in the office were ringing all day long and one man was kept busy answering inquiries from tax payers.

Mr. Bachman said Tuesday he was unable to estimate the amount of taxes paid but believes he will have very few collections to turn over to Chief of Police G. T. Prim after he finishes checking up the tax roll. The total city tax is $1,050,000.

NATIONAL CANNED FOOD WEEK IS OBSERVED HERE

Appleton grocers will observe national canned food week from March 1 to 8 by placing special canned food displays in their windows and by doing all in their power to encourage the use of canned goods.

The process of canning by sealing the container and sterilizing with heat was originated about a century ago by a Frenchman. He received a prize of 12,000 francs from the government for his discovery. Prior to that time the only methods of preserving foods were pickling and drying.

DOCTOR OF SICK CITIES TO SPEAK TO ROTARY CLUB

Colvin B. Brown of National C. of C. Speaks Here March 7

Rotarians are looking forward to the visit here of Colvin B. Brown, chief of the organization bureau of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who has consented to come here March 7 to address a regular meeting of the Rotary club to which members of Appleton Chamber of Commerce have been invited.

When Mr. Brown was invited to speak in Appleton he replied that he would be willing to speak here providing a satisfactory itinerary could be arranged for him covering most of the state. When he visits Appleton he will be enroute to the Pacific coast where he is scheduled to visit several cities in the course of his work. In a letter received Monday Mr. Brown expressed his thanks to Hugh G. Corbett who arranged his itinerary in this state for him.

DOCTORS SICK CITIES

As a "doctor of sick cities" Mr. Brown has gained considerable fame throughout the country. Not long ago the Sunday edition of a metropolitan newspaper, carried a full page illustrated story of the work he has accomplished in stimulating the growth and business of cities all over the country. Much of what he has done for cities has been accomplished through a rejuvenation of chambers of commerce. That Mr. Brown has the faith and the knowledge that a chamber of commerce that is big and broad can do a whole lot for the people of a community, is concluded from a review of his work. It is said that he has always been opposed to the restricted idea of chamber of commerce that is directed and managed only in the interests of a few.

It is planned to have Mr. Brown remain till the evening of the day in which he appears here at the Rotary club's luncheon. If this can be arranged he will speak to directors of the Appleton Chamber of Commerce and the heads of various committees of the organization.

Red Arrow Meeting

An important meeting of the Red Arrow Veterans club will be held Wednesday evening in Knights of Columbus hall. The local charter will be closed at the meeting and those who wish to become charter members are expected to attend. The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock.

Hear the scholar, diplomat and counsel on international matters, Dr. Paul S. Reinsch discuss the recent Washington conference.

Music Memory Contest NO. 23

GEORGE FREDERIC HANDEL
German Composer of Early Eighteenth Century

George Frederic Handel (1685-1759) was one of the greatest masters of the classic school. He wrote chiefly in the form of the Italian open Seria, and the Oratorio. His operas are rarely given today, although many of the single arias from these works are frequently found on concert programs.

Handel's greatest and best known work is "The Messiah", an oratorio produced more often than any other. Handel left his post as court musician of Hanover because England offered more fame and fortune. He is buried in Westminster Abbey. Handel was a contemporary of the great Bach, with whom he stands supreme in the world of music.

Largo

Originally the tenor aria from Handel's opera, "Xerxes," the world famous "Largo" has become the most universally beloved of any Handel composition. The noble and dignified character of this melody has caused it to be used frequently as a religious composition. A perfect example of poetic thought.

The following companies have recorded this number:
Columbia—48803.
Edison—50053.
Victor—55040.
Dux Art—6373.
QRS—11332.

RURAL TELEPHONES ARE HARD HIT BY STORM

Twelve Corners and Mackville Telephone Co., expect to have its telephone lines in working order by the middle of the week. Only six poles were broken, but practically all of the wires were down.

PEOPLE SHOWED GREAT PATIENCE IN STORM TIME

Telegraph Company Employees Pleased With Resigned Spirit of Patrons

It is paradoxical that business is best just when there is no way to take care of it.

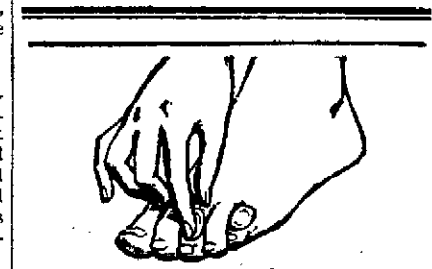

With a continuous stream of customers flooding their doors Thursday, Friday and Saturday, clerks in local telegraph offices were forced to turn away business which would have filled their coffers with money had the wires been working. But there was the rub. Had the wires been up and in order business would probably have been only normal, and that's the paradox.

When all connections were severed early Thursday, local telegraph offices began to refuse messages for transmission. Each prospective customer was told that no messages would be received for immediate transmission, but if he wanted to leave a message for transmission as soon as connections could be restored, it would be accepted.

Even Monday the few connections that had been established were working very weakly. It is believed that only a small part of the messages awaiting transmission here from other points have succeeded in sifting through by wire. Many of them, bearing special delivery stamps, have been received from the Milwaukee and Green Bay offices by mail.

LONG DETOURS

Both local offices Monday were working on roundabout relays to get messages through to the outside world.

In one minute CORNS stop hurting

Nothing in the world like Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads. Put one on—the pain is gone. Healing starts immediately. Zino-pads get at the cause of corns; remove pressure and irritation. Thin; antiseptic; waterproof. Absolutely safe! Try them. Special sizes for corns, callouses and bunions at your drug, gist's or shoe dealer's.

The Postal was relaying messages to Milwaukee and Chicago by way of Gladstone and Minneapolis. The Western Union was forced to make a much longer detour to these cities by way of Green Bay, Duluth, Minneapolis, and East St. Louis.

The public be patient, is the way telegraph clerks here feel after the storm. In most cases the public took the delay and inconvenience smilingly and as a matter of course. Of course there were a few exceptions, but the clerks wish to be clearly understood that the exceptions in this case served only more conclusively to prove the rule.

Now and then an irate traveling salesman would stride up to the counter and want to know how the chance was to get a message through to the wife and kiddies who were anxious about him down in Knoxville, Tenn. or somewhere else, perhaps. When he was told that there were no chances he would pronounce with great emphasis, the word that Sherman said war was. In fact he spoke so vehemently in some instances, the clerks declare, that if emphasis had been electricity his words would have gone home by wireless.

But in the main, the public behaved itself splendidly, and local telegraph people are proud that the storm gave them the opportunity of meeting a few people who proved themselves bigger than circumstances.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to cure it, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

PAPERMILLS ARE HANDICAPPED BY TIEUP OF TRAINS

Patten Mill Forced to Shut Down for Few Days When Pulp Ran Low

All the paper mills of Fox river valley were handicapped by the storm and among those compelled to shut down was that of the Patten Paper Co. The plant has been idle since Friday when it ran out of pulp and did not resume operations until Tuesday. The company had a supply of pulp in the railroad yards but because the sidetrack was covered with ice was unable to get the cars spotted.

Two carloads of paper ready to ship out last Friday occupied the sidetrack and had to be moved before the pulp could be unloaded. A crew of men removed the ice from the track with picks Monday and a switch engine reached the mill late in the afternoon.

The Riverside Fibre and Paper Co., was also handicapped for lack of pulp. It had an abundant supply at its pulp mill but was unable to get it transported to its paper mill. Both mills are located on tracks of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Co., which did not finish removing the ice from its rails until Sunday, when it had a large crew of men at work all day.

The paper mill was kept in operation with the aid of motor trucks which were kept busy transporting pulp until Monday, when railroad service was resumed. At one time it looked as if the plant might run out of coal, but as it still has several days' supply on hand and a fresh supply in the railroad yards this danger has been eliminated.

The Fox River Paper Co., has kept its plant in operation, but owing to the transportation tieup has been unable to move its product.

MAKING THE GOVERNMENT
RIDICULOUS

It is stated in a dispatch from Washington that President Harding has "won a sweeping victory" in his fight with senate irreconcilables over the question of reservations to the four-power Pacific treaty. These extremists, led by Senators Borah and Johnson, desired to weigh the treaty down with amendments that would practically prevent even American participation in Pacific conferences without the consent of congress. Of course it is apparent that a surrender to any such proposal would have involved the administration in an impossible absurdity. It would have been equivalent to a complete rejection of the treaty, and there would have been no reason for submitting it in the first instance. It would also be a renunciation of constitutional power.

The president's "victory" is held to be the acceptance of a compromise reservation which declares that "The United States understands that under the statement of the preamble or under the terms of this treaty there is no commitment to use force, no alliance and no obligation to use force." While this is not, it is true, as drastic a reservation as the amendment proposed by the bitter-enders, it is nevertheless an inconsistent and altogether unnecessary modification of the treaty. Its purpose is purely to placate politicians and promote "harmony." It does not seem to matter that it compromises the state department and the representatives of the United States in the arms conference, to say nothing of the president himself. It is to be supposed that the branch of government charged with the making of treaties knows what it is doing when it negotiates instruments of this kind, that it gives them the fullest consideration and that their consequences and commitments are understood before signatures are affixed.

The senate's insistence on a reservation to the four-power treaty has the effect of declaring to the world that the American state department, as well as the president of the United States, is incompetent to negotiate treaties and has made a mess of the agreement concluded with Great Britain, France and Japan. If the reservation tacked onto the treaty is really essential to the protection of American interests and really means anything, it also means that without the reservation the treaty is a menace to the United States and ought never to have been signed. If the senate is saving the country from a genuine peril, what is to be said of the president, the secretary of state and the American delegates to the arms conference for leading us into the peril and sacrificing our national security?

Of course the truth is that the president, Secretary Hughes and the others responsible for the four-power treaty have done nothing of the kind. The treaty as it stands is neither a menace to American interests nor a source of embarrassing obligations. The senate knows that no one can commit the United States to war but the congress, and it also knows that regardless of the reservations the country would be its own interpreter of the question as to whether or not and to what extent the alliance was to be carried out and its obligations discharged.

It would be silly to assume that a treaty of this kind could be entered into without imposing obligations of some kind. There cannot be an agreement to do or not to do a thing without the element of obligation. The senate reservation amounts to an effort to make the public believe that there are no obligations under the treaty. It is simply child's play with an act of great national importance and it makes the state department ridiculous.

President Harding's amiability and his desire to please all factions will yet get the best of him if he tries to keep peace by paying such prices. The president should make it clear to the senate that the executive and state departments know what they are about when they negotiate treaties, and should insist upon ratification of the four-power agreement without change. It is the only way the dignity and competency of the government can be upheld. It is time for another finish fight with the irreconcilables and their senseless objections to that American participation in world affairs which our position, our interests and our duty to mankind demand.

SHOULD BE TAUGHT POLITICAL FUNDAMENTALS

Of late the National Security league has been giving publicity to digests of census bureau statistics on city government, with the object of interesting the people in the cost of municipal administration. Now it is arranging a campaign for legislation in the various states to require courses in the American constitution in schools, colleges and universities. Illinois, Iowa, Michigan and Vermont have such a law.

Every citizen should be familiar with the constitution and with the Declaration of Independence. These documents contain the principles of Americanism and government. But knowledge of American fundamentals should not be restricted to the constitution and the Declaration of Independence. Every citizen should have a practical understanding of the political system, as an incentive to take active interest in local, state and national affairs. He should also be taught local and state history.

RESERVE BOARD SEES PROSPERITY

The Federal Reserve board states in its annual report that the trend of general industrial and business conditions now points upward. There has been a pronounced industrial reaction which has been reflected favorably in banking conditions.

It has been predicted by many leading economists, of the class who study commerce from a practical instead of a theoretical point of view, that the depression would be completed in January or February through the strain of off-season between the holidays and spring. Conclusions of the Federal Reserve board bear out the prognostication that this tension will force the final liquidation.

Difference of opinion exists among authorities at present regarding only one feature of the revival. All are agreed that the downward trend has run its course. Some experts believe that the improvement will be gradual and substantial, whereas others maintain that it will be quick and vigorous.

The proper policy to govern business management is, of course, the conservative. This is the policy that business men some time ago adopted and are still following. Stocks are adjusted to the current demand, and the relationship between the retailer, jobber and manufacturer is one of buying and producing to meet the requirements of the public.

On the other hand, it is probable renewed activity will get under noticeable headway in a few weeks. As soon as the buying energy of the construction industry becomes assertive with the opening of spring, the impetus should be felt by mill, mine and factory, and re-employment of idle workmen will help to stabilize prices of farm products and accelerate the demand of consumers. Many merchandise stocks are small, and on this account buying in due time will be heavy.

It is gratifying to have the Federal Reserve board's ratification of the general opinion that the business trend is now upward. It is added reassurance that this will be a prosperous year.

British Achievement at Washington

British happiness over the results of the Washington conference need not make Americans wonder if "something has been put over on them." We should not be suspicious because Lloyd George describes the conference as "one of the greatest achievements in the history of the world." There is a better way to measure the achievement of an international negotiation than by the discomfort and chagrin it causes the party or parties of the other part. If our own national interests have not been sacrificed, we may rejoice because others have fared so well.

In one important particular the British have earned their great diplomatic success at Washington—a success only second to Japan's phenomenal and unprecedented accomplishment. The British had been urged by American presidents for years to "settle the Irish question" as the necessary preliminary to an Anglo-American understanding, but they deserve full credit for having finally done the job—if only in the nick of time.—SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN (Ind.)

ONE BABY'S FIGHT

"I am a young and inexperienced mother, I have a baby girl five weeks old, and she has chronic colic cramps until her legs draw up to her stomach, cries until you would think her head would burst, causes many wakeful hours, and I know she can't stand the milk. She wees a lot, when born and seemed strong. She has gained four pounds in five weeks. Have tried everything from castor oil to caraway seed tea, peppermint, catnip, essence of pepsin and olive oil. Have taken cathartics myself to see if that would help the baby. And I have not gone out doors once, so as not to take cold. I have almost stopped eating, except tea, and bread and butter. One neighbor tells me this and another tells me that, until I am almost distracted, and worried to death."

Poor little mother. Probably not a thing the matter with the baby, except that she is overnourished. Peppermint for a five weeks old baby. It is a crime to ply tender little fragments of humanity with such powerful irritants. No wonder the baby raises hob. I bet she'd like to bite the hand that fed her mother that stuff.

A healthy young baby must get exercise somehow. If she gets it by drawing up her legs and making the welkin ring, that is all right. If she chooses 10 or 12 p. m. or 4 a. m. for her exercise period, that is all right, too.

The inexperienced young mother's education was sadly neglected. The public school where she absorbed geography and grammar didn't teach her the most important thing in life—how to care for a baby. That is where the nation's public school system falls on one score.

The young mother has three big lessons to learn, and the sooner she learns them the better. The first lesson is that a nursing mother should eat anything and everything on the ordinary bill of fare, and avoid nothing whatever, sweet or sour, that ordinarily agrees with her. In the next place, she must learn that it is absolutely essential for her to have one hour in the open air every day in the year, if she wishes to make a success of the greatest job a woman ever tackled. And of course she should take the baby out with her. And the third lesson is that it is dangerous to pour any medicine whatever into a young baby without your doctor's orders. That evil habit is really accountable for most of the trouble inexperienced mothers have raising babies.

E. P. C.'s Bran Bread

Question. Will you please give me a recipe for making the bran bread you have referred to so often in your references to constipation? Mrs. E. H.

Answer. Here is the recipe of E. P. C., a trained nurse and skilled dietitian of St. Paul:

One quart wheat bran, one quart white flour, one quart buttermilk or sour milk, one cup seeded raisins, one cup molasses, one teaspoonful baking powder, one teaspoonful salt, one half teaspoonful soda. (Eight items (8)—be sure to get them all in). Mix well, put batter into three well greased pans, and bake in a slow oven. If gas oven be used, light the burners when bread is done.

Play Hard

Question. In your opinion is basketball harmful for girls? Is it inadvisable for girls to go into the game with a lot of enthusiasm, if they play girls' rules? There are those who would stop us, so we should value your opinion. Also, do you think it hurts to play—at the wrong time? B. G.

Answer. By all means, get with all the enthusiasm you must, and keep up all your regular activities and games at all times. Dr. Clella Duell Mosher, medical adviser of girl students in Stanford university, observes that girls who refuse to be considered "delicate" at regular intervals maintain the best health records.

ALLIGATOR FARMING

During the past few years the man of science has been studying the alligator and has discovered that a good-sized specimen is worth far more money from a commercial point of view than the largest ater that was ever led to the slaughter-house.

The scientist has also discovered that it is possible to breed alligators in much the same way as one breeds chickens, and even more successfully. There are several alligator farms in the United States, the present time and they are making the fortunes of their owners.

Resume of American and Foreign Newspaper Opinion

Managing a Movie Colony

Recent events at Hollywood disclose that the editorial mind has arrived at two simple and definite conclusions on the movie subject: First, that the cause of the hectic events that are making for notoriety in the film center is a combination of much money and little character; and secondly, that the remedy may be Will Hays.

"The LAFAYETTE JOURNAL-COURIER is of the opinion that 'Mr. Hays is not leaving the office of postmaster general any too soon if his services as chief salvager' of the movie industry are to be effective," and the OREGON JOURNAL (Portland) believes that "if Mr. Hays can clean up Hollywood he will be worth many times his salary." The industry "is very largely what it is, and owners back east see fit to make it." "Will Hays is recently reported as having said that when he comes into command of the picture show business he will remove Hollywood to Long Island, and he would have a community church in the middle of the settlement." The FREMONT (Neb.) TRIBUNE and adds that he "will be justified in taking some drastic measures to institute a radical reform in the life of the movie colony."

"The plain truth is that the American people are paying too much for what they receive," is the conclusion of the LINCOLN STAR, after commenting upon the conflicting phenomena of "numerous so-called stars" who receive, "from fifty thousand to a quarter of a million a year" and producers with a "sorry tale, fearful lest imported films drive them into bankruptcy." The TOPICA CAPITAL, agrees with Louis Joseph Vance and "wails the secret of Hollywood's movie degeneracy is in the luxuriance of the dollar crop." "It used to be said," continues this paper, "that the uses of an aristocracy consist in example, the fixing of standards," but "to excel in vulgarity is a worthy contemporary ambition." The fund-raising trouble in Hollywood, "in the opinion of the GENEVE TIMES," "seems to be a lack of intelligence and common sense." "We need not apply the test of character, which is the highest; intelligence alone should save any calling or any colony from such excesses as these of Hollywood." "Quite in contrast to the Main Street of mind is the Hollywood of the psychos," says the MINNEAPOLIS JOURNAL which believes that the "Hollywood way of life endangers the moving picture industry and art in this country," since its "shallowness and wilfulness" offend the "moral sense of the right-thinking average American."

Of contrary mind is the WHEELING EX-EMPIR which declares that the "scandals that have been uncovered recently" will "cripple the movies in the slightest degree" but that "men and women who transgress law and decency will disappear from the movies because eventually promoters will find that people do not want to see the PHILADELPHIA PUBLIC LEDGER feels that the chasm between real and stage life is so wide that "the two kinds of life don't speak each other's language, even if representatives of both attend the same church," and the SAGINAW NEWS-COURIER believes that "whatever else is said of the moving picture business it never yet has been accused of too strict adherence to the conventions common to ordinary life," and that actors, producers, directors and writers all acquire "the oblique viewpoint of life." "Mr. Hays has certainly taken on some job." The NEW ORLEANS SPATON on the other hand, believes that movie film actors are worthy that they respect all the conventions." The ATLANTA CONSTITUTION thinks "fairness demands that public condemnation of the motion picture industry in its entirety, as a result of recent exposures of deleterious conditions within it, be held in abeyance at least pending the outcome of drastic reforms." Likewise the application of which has been promised." The ANACONDA STANDARD explains the "adverse comment directed at both producers and actors" as "one of the penalties attached to prominence and those who suddenly acquire wealth and fame." The LOS ANGELES TIMES protests against "private papers' reports in the apartments of the murdered man" being "shouted from the houseposts," involving "as they do" the letters of young girls, with "no pretense on the part of any one that these missives have any possible bearing upon the murder mystery." Likewise the AUGUSTA (Ga.) CHRONICLE characterizes as "moral hygiene" the barring of actresses who have incurred publicity in connection with the latest Hollywood murder by certain moving picture censors, pleading that "their names are always associated with the class of decent pictures," and that "bar pictures acted by people who have already made big reputations by their dramatic gift and splendid acting is altogether illogical and absurd."

The PORT WAYNE JOURNAL-GAZETTE finds "abundant evidence that the plan is not to reform Hollywood and the press with glowing stories of the beautiful home life of the people who have recently figured conspicuously in the papers in an unenviable light. The mayor of Los Angeles has come to the front with a tribute to the impeccable purity of the people among whom within the last year, a natural Los Angeles cannot afford to lose Hollywood. Nor is there any necessity for it. The public protest is not against Hollywood, but against the things that are done there. It ought to be plain to the men who have millions invested that they are facing a problem that they must solve, not evade."

France in American Opinion

Parley Andre Tardieu, writer in L'Echo National, has this to say about how he conceives France to have been unfortunately represented at the Washington Conference.

"The Washington Conference has finished its work. It has sanctioned a naval treaty and the agreement concerning the fortifying of the Pacific Island, notified Japan's promise to return Shantung to China and England's promise to give back Weihai-Wei.

"These are results which, are far from exhausting the Pacific problems or the disamament question, results which on many points, especially in China still leave essential causes for disputes; but all the same they are results.

"But the question is, will these agreements be ratified by the American senate? This is not at all sure; and if this ratification does not take place the whole thing will fall to pieces.

"For the matter of that, it is not astonishing that the French, in order to judge the situation take the point of view of French interests, and from this point of view there is nothing good.

"Before the Washington conference we had the great majority of the American press on our side. Today it is just the opposite.

"M. Briand's dull jokes, M. Viviani's capricious anger, and M. Sarraut's unfitted familiarity came as a shock to a country where manners count for much. But there is more in it than that.

"Our whole method of action, or rather our want of method, has astonished our best friends who were accustomed during the war to see the French work" differently.

"On the eve of the departure of our delegates for Washington, I said in the Chamber that it seemed to me that neither the technical nor the general preparation for the Conference had been adequate. The results have proved me to have been right.

"When M. Briand left for Washington he arrogantly declared that he was going as mediator, and scarcely had he arrived when he and his colleagues tried to play the American card against the English one, although from the beginning it was quite obvious that nobody wanted their mediation.

"It was even very evident that an agreement had been reached without us, and when Mr. Hughes mentioned this in his inaugural speech, M. Briand was put out of countenance and omitted to speak of our naval interests.

"Three days later we were introduced by a small door to a secondary agreement.

"And even for this nothing was ready. We demanded 350,000 tons of capital ships and forty-eight hours later, confronted with general stupefaction, we agreed without any explanation to less than half.

"When the first Lord of the British Admiralty attributed the responsibility to us of an article published in a semi-official paper by Commander Casteix, our delegates—who of course had not read the article—pleaded responsibility, and it was not until afterwards that they found out with the help of the Parisian press, that Commander Casteix had never written what Lord Lee attributed to him.

"Our representatives behaved in such a way that when the Americans refused to suppress submarines it is France which today bears the responsibility for the refusal.

"Military armaments were not to be discussed; this silence was a mark of respect for France on behalf of the American government.

"But Mr. Briand meant to have his day, insisted, as the Americans said, like a tenor, on singing his piece in the interval. A few hours after the whole American press was against us, simply because M. Briand had spoken of and prophesied an aggression which the Americans don't believe in.

"But on the other hand, he had forgotten to mention the guarantee of security which equals for us, according to the Versailles Treaty, the prolonged occupation of the Rhine.

"Neither did he say a word about the necessity—admitted by everybody in the United States—of keeping a hand on a factory door.

"On his return to France he prided himself on having 'pleaded' for the Washington Conference was no court of justice and nobody had demanded our accounts."

Afterwards when the question arose about the open door in China by a strange paradox we were the only ones to make conditions—and why?

"Finally we had M. Sarraut's speech, and he also thought it right to plead. But in America it is much better to explain and especially not to have to correct the effects of acts by speeches.

"Three advocates went to the United States to speak for France, and France has never been judged more wrongly."

Monte Carlo Prosperity

Monte Carlo. "What sort of a season will it be?" This recurring question has been pronounced for at least a month all over the Riviera, the famous holiday resort of Europe, says a correspondent of the LONDON TIMES, who says that looking back at the pre-war seasons, there appears solid ground for reasonable optimism. "It would not be easy to prove this statistically without research, but the impression is that, taking the Riviera as a whole, there are at least as many visitors in hotels and villas and apartments now as there were in 1913.

"It is true that the Prince of Wales's India tour and other diversions have diverted many British visitors from the Azuro Coast at the beginning of the season, but their places have been taken by the new streams of Americans."

MATT SCHMIDT & SON
TWO FLOORS OF GOOD THINGS FOR MEN

Sunday Sermon

(The following is a synopsis of a sermon preached on Sunday, Feb. 27, by the Rev. H. A. Bernhardt, pastor of Emanuel Evangelical church, on the text printed below. It was the second sermon on the same text, the first having been preached Feb. 12.)

"Fellowship With God"
Text:—"But if we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1:7.

The Christian life does not consist in going to church, reading the Bible, giving of gifts, doing good works and living respectably. One may do all these and many more and yet in reality not be a Christian. The real essence of the Christian life consists in a vital, living, personal fellowship with Christ and through Him with God the Father. In the words of our text we have not only the conditions of fellowship with God but also the consequences of such fellowship.

The condition of fellowship with God is stated very positively by the apostle, "Walk in the light as He is in the light." To walk in the light means: 1. A mystical union between God and man. This union is possible through Jesus Christ the Son of God. Man is assimilated by God, having his life in God and that so much so that it is no longer I that am living but Christ liveth in me, because I am crucified with Christ and it is no longer I that live but Christ liveth in me and the life that I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me.

2. Not only is God light, but He also dwells in the light. It is the sphere in which God manifests Himself. Thus walking in the light denotes that our daily life be good and God-like. There ought to be an atmosphere about us that impresses others with the very presence of God.

3. Light also denotes purity, holiness and truth. Light not only reveals the impure but also cleanses. In clothes all things with beauty. If thus we walk in the light our lives ought to be pure and clothed with a heavenly beauty. Holiness in the best expression of what God is. It includes even a holy love. Holiness! How far does it not carry us away from the unclean, the mean, the selfish and utterly sinful! It cannot mean anything less than that our lives be separated from all that is sinful and wholly consecrated to God. Truth! It includes embracing the Word of God, believing it and living it, in opposition to all forms of heathenism and infidelity. It includes a sincere and clear religious experience. To put it into one single sentence we may say, the condition of fellowship with God is that the character and life resemble the character and life of God Himself.

If, What are now the consequences of walking in the light? We have fellowship one with another. One consequence of fellowship with God is the fellowship of His saints. The reality of our love towards God is tested by the reality of our love towards our fellowmen. "If any man says he loves God and hates his brother, he is a liar and the truth is not in him." You can't even take your seat in the sanctuary of God unless you are in fellowship with Him.

4. What are now the consequences of walking in the light? We have fellowship one with another. One consequence of fellowship with God is the fellowship of His saints. The reality of our love towards God is tested by the reality of our love towards our fellowmen. "If any man says he loves God and hates his brother, he is a liar and the truth is not in him." You can't even take your seat in the sanctuary of God unless you are in fellowship with Him.

Q. Who is known as "the Voltair of Greece"? C. W. F.
Q. A Xenophanes, who as a free-thinker did not reserve his opinions for his disciples and immediately lowered but declared that "the truth should be made known to all," has been referred to as "the Voltair of Greece" by some modern writers.
Q. A contends that Christians could never be known as atheists; B insists that they have been so designated. Which is right? G. A. M.
A. In ancient Rome the Christians were sometimes called atheists because they denied the Roman gods. They were not, however, atheists in the modern acceptance of the term.

The WRONG FACE

By ISABEL OSTRANDER

CHAPTER I

"Why Frank! You're back again and safe!" The young woman in mourning held out her hand to the chauffeur. "My aunt wrote you were a prisoner in Germany."

"It's fine to see you, Miss Fay," returned the chauffeur. "They turned us loose after the armistice." He hesitated. "I-I'd like to say, miss, that we all felt something terrible—the servants, I mean—when the news came about poor Mr. Tudor."

He shut the door and, climbing in behind the wheel, drove down the village street. Fay's soft blue eyes had blurred at the reference to her brother, but she winked back the tears determinedly.

Sandy Cove was one of the most exclusive of summer colonies, and Fay looked at the superb estates which had once been so familiar with a sense of bewilderment. Everything seemed just the same, just as she had remembered it, and yet there appeared to be a subtle, intangible difference. Could it be merely her nerves again, those wretched overtaxed nerves which had driven her from her reconstruction work in France?

She leaned forward impulsively. "My aunt and cousin; they are both well, Frank?"

"Yes, Miss Fay." Fay sat back once more. Dear Aunt Clara. Her uncle's widow was as close to her as her own blood, and Laurel, her cousin, had been like a little dark-eyed, vivacious sister.

The car swirled up the driveway, and halted before the steps of the wide porch, upon which a slender, white-clad figure stood.

Fay had only time to note that the pliant face seemed as childishly naive as ever, before her cousin folded her in a tense embrace.

"Oh, Fay! Fay!" I thought that transport never would get in.

"Laurel, dear!" Fay kissed her warmly, and mounted the steps to meet the graciously figure advancing toward her.

Mrs. Tudor was thirty-seven and looked twenty-five, with the delicate tender irregularity of feature which just escapes actual beauty. Everything about her was pretty; her blond hair and soft blue eyes and the rose-leaf skin, which was innocent of the slightest line. Her still girlish slender figure moved with a slow rhythmic grace.

Later, during the meal, Fay studied her aunt and cousin covertly. It seemed there was a strained note in Laurel's vivacity which betrayed a nervous tension.

She was puzzling over it when the girl remarked: "You haven't asked about any of the old crowd, Fay. Now that the men are back it is like the old Sandy Cove again and others are staying at the Country Club."

"Mr. Clayton?" Fay glanced up quickly. "Yes. One of the dollar-a-year men in Washington."

"He has been magnificently generous," Fay's eyes glowed. "I shall be glad to see him again."

Mrs. Tudor glanced across the table at her niece and smiled. "He's quite the same as ever," she said. "Plays abominable bridge and talks shop."

"Oh, mother only abuses him because he is as insane about her as ever!" Laurel laughed, but there was a nervous little quiver in her voice as she hurried on. "Jack Huntington is at the club—and Harry Cadmus."

She drew a quick breath as she mentioned the last name, and her eyes seemed to burn into her cousin's, but Fay merely responded quietly: "Is he?"

Harry Cadmus, Fay actually had forgotten his very existence for more than a year. How heartbroken she had fancied herself when the big test came and he had frantically pulled wires to obtain an assignment at home rather than face the hazards of active service! With what hot scorn had she parted from him! And now it was with difficulty that she could conjure up a fleeting impression of him.

Mrs. Tudor rose. "Fay, I did not mean to touch upon your brother's death so soon after your return, but I think you may be glad to know that Wilbur's friend brought all his things to us, and they are in his old room now. The key is on your dresser."

"It was Captain Warren who brought them?" Fay asked. "Did you like him?"

"We did not even meet him. We were up in the Berkshires when he came. By the way, I fancy we shall have a crowd from the club for tea."

"Please, Aunt Clara," Fay protested, "you will let me escape, won't you?"

"But they will be so disappointed!" Laurel exclaimed. "Seeing them in such an informal way will be easier than if they all paid stiff calls of condolence. If you put off meeting them there will be talk."

"Why?" Fay demanded.

"Well, they'll think it queer of you. 'Nervous breakdown' is such an elastic term."

"Laurel means, dear, that they will think you are really ill, when all you need is a good rest," Mrs. Tudor interrupted smoothly.

Fay passed her hand over her eyes. "I am a little tired. I think I shall rest for a while if I am to meet these people later."

Fay's tired nerves relaxed in the dim quietude of the room which she was to share with Laurel.

As she picked up her hand mirror for a glance at her hair, a key on the dressing table caught her eye and she put the mirror aside. The key to Wilbur's room!

Taking up the key she made her way to the one closed door down the hall and, unlocking it, paused upon the threshold.

Her eyes strayed to the mantel, and with a little exclamation of surprise she drew nearer to it. A hand grenade, a tin hat, and a gas mask! Then all at once she recalled what her aunt had said—that Captain Warren had brought Wilbur's things home. She touched the helmet with tender reverence, and took up the gas mask, but the dark stains upon its made her recoil and the full horror and desolation of her loss swept over her.

She returned to her own room to remove the traces of her emotion in the determination to take up her life again among those carelessly happy people below as soon as she could.

As she came down the stairs a few minutes later a man standing in the hallway came quickly forward. "Oh, there you are, Clara! I heard voices out on the lawn and was just about to—"

He paused as the girl advanced and held out her hand. "How do you do, Mr. Clayton?" Am I so very like my aunt? I am complimented.

"Miss Tudor!" The newcomer recovered from his surprise and shook hands cordially. "When did you return?"

"Just this morning. Do you know I feel like a dancer who suddenly finds herself out of step?" Fay smiled. "Silly isn't it?"

"No, I don't think it's silly," he responded. "You've been living under such high pressure that this seems unreal, as though you were looking on at some pleasant-mannered comedy on the stage."

"Yes, that is it!" Fay exclaimed. "I want to talk to you, Clayton, suddenly. 'Do you know I haven't yet got over the shock you gave me just now? I can never quite realize that you are actually grown up, even when I read about

JAPAN WILL SAVE $100,000,000 BY REDUCING NAVY

Nipponese Are Figuring What They Will do With so Vast a Sum of Money

Tokyo — Japan will save something like 200,000,000 yen, or $100,000,000 per year on naval budgets alone, if the Hughes agreements go through at Washington and are ratified.

All the financiers in Japan—amateur and professional in and out of the government—are figuring what to do with the money.

Estimates vary, some higher, some lower, but a conservative average of the best informed opinion here is the figure given above.

Junnosuke Inouye, Governor of the Bank of Japan, and perhaps the foremost financial authority here, confessed that it is almost impossible to predict the net saving with accurate detail.

AID UNEMPLOYED He pointed out that the government will be called upon to pay unemployed allowances to discharged shipyard workers and reimburse government naval contractors whose business will be temporarily ruined by cessation of war-craft construction.

For this reason Inouye said the actual "saving" may be reduced considerably.

"There is a Japanese proverb," said Inouye, "which runs like this: 'Do not sell the skin until you have caught the animal.'"

"It is unwise to predict how much taxes can be reduced, or how much money will be available for non-naval purposes as a result of a naval holiday. The period of readjustment of unemployment, of converting naval plants into other productions will be costly, and may eat up much of the 'paper savings'."

Nevertheless the people, the politicians, the press and a host of self-nominated experts are producing various "budgets" for the use of the savings.

PLAN SCHOOLS Schools and good roads lead the list in every case. It is very clear that if the popular will has its way the greatest naval armament reduction beneficiary in Japan will be the educational system, with highway construction, which is sorely needed, a close second.

However, the cold fact is that notwithstanding the widespread desire for education—which is nothing less than a passion with the Japanese—the most popular thing the government can do will be to reduce taxes.

Accordingly it is most probable, despite all the beautiful and elaborate programs for utilization of the "savings" that the Takahashi ministry will try to popularize itself by chopping all proposed new expenditures, and thus trimming the tax rate.

Premier Takahashi, who succeeded the assassinated Premier Hara as head of the Seiyukai party realizes that he and his party have ahead of them the bitterest domestic political fight Japan has known.

FUNERAL LOST IN FOG Norwich, England.—A funeral procession on its way to the cemetery near here lost its way in the recent heavy fog. One coach became separated from the rest and landed in a garden. The mourners had to grope their way to the cemetery.

PIRATES IN NEAR EAST Constantinople.—A sailing vessel has been found in the Sea of Marmara with two wounded sailors on board. The men declare the captain and two of the crew had been killed by pirates.

THE OLD HOME TOWN So it had been Captain Warren who brought Wilbur's things home. He had come to see her in Paris on his first furlough after her brother was killed, and she recalled him as a tall, self-contained man, with kindly grey eyes. She wished that she had been at home here to receive him.

With a start her thought came abruptly back to the present and she leaned forward, had something moved there beneath that clump of trees?

It must be simply her nerves, which peopled the shadows. With a shrug she sank back among the cushions, and her mind reverted to the captain one moment.

Suddenly she was aware of a rustling in the shrubbery directly beside the window and without warning a face appeared within a few inches of her own!

It was a white, drawn face with disheveled hair and eyes which stared wildly into hers for a moment, while she held her breath in surprise and terror.

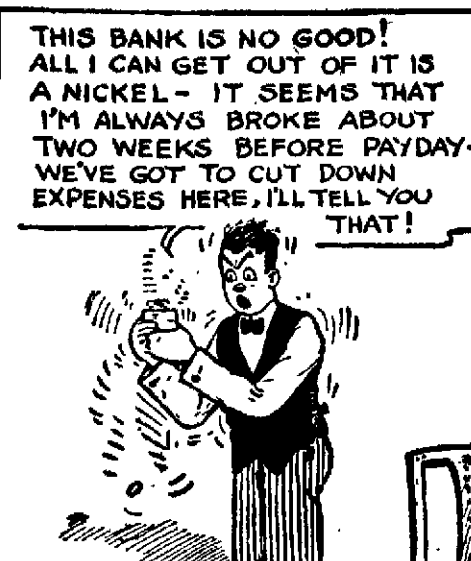

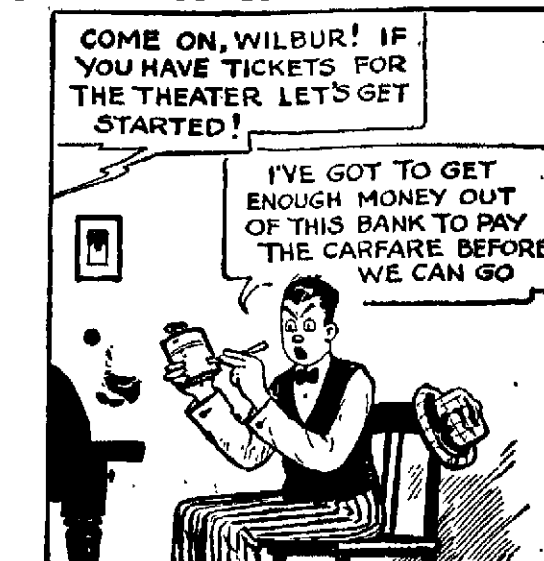

The next instant it had disappeared, and there remained only the night breeze rustling through the shrubbery.

CHAPTER II The next morning, when Fay awakened, she was ready to laugh at her own fancy of the night before. Her overwrought imagination had played her strange tricks since her nerves had given way, but never had her vision taken so startling a turn.

The pallid horror of it, and the staring, almost maniacal, eyes were like nothing she had seen in a human being; it could only be the stuff of which nightmares are made.

ATHENS HEIRESS STUDIES LAW TO HELP OUT WOMEN

Modern "Maid of Athens" For-sakes Great Estate for Tiny Studio

Athens—If Lord Byron were to sing of the maid of Athens today it is quite probable he would modify his poetry. Instead of—
"Maid of Athens, ere we part Give, oh, give me back my heart"— he would probably be writing for the latest legal brief to see if there were any chance for an attachment suit.

RICHEST HEIRESS
The most modern Athenian maid is not only the richest heiress in the Heleneas but she is perhaps the most advanced and exceptional young woman of Europe.

How many heiresses to millions, only daughter of a house with a family tree the most ancient in Greece—would voluntarily take a little studio in Athens and burn the midnight electricity nover over law books?

Miss Irene Mano has done that. Little Miss Mano is just 20 and she began her legal studies when she was 17. When she calmly made the announcement that she was leaving the vast estate in Athens for a simple studio in Athens, all Athenian society was astounded. The thing had never been done before.

"I wanted to study law because I intend to understand, thoroughly, the rights of women. I think the day of woman is at hand here in Greece as elsewhere. Just because I am my father's daughter shouldn't make me a parasite."

"All the more reason for my studying law. A woman who inherits property ought to know something about looking after her own affairs."

"But my real inspiration in studying law is a desire to really know the legal status of women, and, well, there are laws that some day will be changed."

HOPES TO INSPIRE

"I hope I will inspire other girls to take up professional careers. I have very little interest in the frivolous side of life. At the university these are eight other girls studying from necessity. I am the only one, I guess, who has taken up the study of law from pure personal desire."

Miss Mano speaks English and French as perfectly as she does Greek. She is also proficient in German and knows some Rumanian. "I'm ambitious to go to America and study in an American university," she said.

GIRL SHARES ISLAND KING'S THRONE, BUT—

MISS RUTH COVEY MERRITT

Oakland, Cal.—Miss Ruth Covey Merritt, dining society girl, is back from the Philippines where she was the first white woman honored with a formal reception by the king of the primitive Zambales Negritos in a secluded corner of the islands. Here's Miss Merritt's own story of her experience:

BY RUTH COVEY MERRITT
In America we send out cards ahead when we're going to a reception. Not so in Zambale Land.

Instead the fashion is to send a bundle of old clothing, cheap jewelry, small mirrors and other trinkets.

And instead of taking a limousine over a boulevard, I had to hike seven miles over a tangled trail, crossing five rivers.

The nearest thing to butlers the king could provide was guides.

And the reception! A half mile off I could hear the sound of voices shrieking a welcome song. Finally I was ushered into the reception room, a small junkie clearinghouse.

The king, proudly wearing the cast-off golf cap and ill-fitting broadcloth suit I had sent ahead, left this picturesque throne for an informal greeting.

Then I was amazed to hear, coming from a treacherous, singing voice chanting "A Hot Time in the Old Town." It was being sung by the princess who had learned it from American hunters.

As a woman is of little consequence in the tribe the queen was allowed to stay but a moment. During that moment, however, she borrowed a cheap rhinestone hatpin I was wearing and, putting it rakishly into her coiffure, forgot to return it.

After this the "party" started. A parade of natives appeared bearing water in coconut shells. We adjourned to the "council chamber," another junkie clearinghouse. Here had been built the official throne and the great honor of letting me share it with the king was bestowed.

From this point we viewed the program which included an archery contest, a round of strange tea served in bamboo cups, a course of wild chicken soup, a strange dish of wild honey served on a banana leaf, and musical numbers on weird instruments followed by the wildest of dances.

At 4 o'clock I was informed that it was time to go. As I looked back I noted the natives hurriedly stripping themselves of the American clothing an distretching comfortably in unadorned nakedness.

LETTERS TO LOVERS

Halting Tragedy

By Winona Wilcox

I cannot control my instincts, but he can refuse to stimulate them. That teaching of the psychologists I have quoted several times, for in it is the secret of much misery and much happiness for men and women.

It is the particular lesson which the writer of the following could profit by. This startling letter deals openly with the circle of primitive human instincts: the worship of my husband when I married him. He could have cut me into pieces and I would not have cried out. Naturally, I was insanely jealous. Inside of six months we had a quarrel and I went back to my parents.

Immediately I was wretched. I wired him. He told me to suit myself about returning. I loved him. I went back, and ever since I have been a slave.

"He pretends to worship his children, then he tells them they are his, and that I am only their mother!"

"In eight years of our married life he has had many a love affair and for them I hate him. When I object he threatens to throw me into the street and to keep my babies from me. He is a bully, but our friends do not know."

"He provides his family with everything. I have many luxuries. Still I hate the man. He says I am the handsomest woman he ever saw, he likes to take me to public places where I can be seen and all my women friends envy me. They do not know that I go riding in my car. When he comes home early, when he makes love to me I hide in a corner of the house."

"When I lose my temper he is so pleased. He likes to get me angry. I want to take my children and run away before I do something desperate."

For pages this letter continues a weary tale of violent domestic infelicity.

The worst of all tragedies is that which binds two together when they excite in each other nothing but the primitive instincts, hate and love, jealousy, revenge and anger.

Some such cases ought to be solved by speedy divorce. But when all the luxuries of life are at the command of a woman who never has worked, she would do well to think hard before surrendering them to face the hardships of business in a time of commercial depression.

Before the ultimate step is taken it would be wise for this wife to take forty days in the wilderness in which to meditate upon her troubles. She may finally prefer those she has to some she knows not of.

And sometimes it is an excellent plan for a wife to change front completely, to stop the hating and quarreling, to remake her emotions.

What would be the irritable husband's reaction to a kindness, patience, sweetness and good humor?

Sometimes a little admiration bestowed upon a man's good points works like a miracle.

Make an experiment ought to prove intensely interesting to the wife who has for long used the opposite methods.

Canned Fish

PERHAPS these recipes for using canned fish will appeal to you. They are a bit out of the ordinary and quite economical.

Canned or smoked fish is apt to become more or less monotonous and unpopular unless carefully prepared and served.

SALMON PIE
One and one-half cups flaked salmon, 1 1/2 cups cold mashed potatoes, 2 eggs, 1 tablespoon bread crumbs, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper.

Remove all skin and bones from salmon and flake. Mix with potatoes, add butter, salt and pepper and eggs. Mix well and add enough milk to make of the consistency of very thick batter. Beat well. Turn into a buttered baking dish, cover with bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven about 45 minutes. Any left-over cooked fish can be used in place of salmon.

SALMON AND MACARONI
Two cups flaked salmon, 1/2 cup macaroni broken in inch pieces, 3 tablespoons grated cheese, 1 tablespoon butter, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1 cup white sauce.
Remove all skin and bones from salmon and flake. Boil macaroni for 15 minutes in salted water. Drain and blanch. Add to white sauce. Add two tablespoons cheese, fish, salt and pepper to macaroni mixture. Mix well and turn into a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with remaining cheese, dot with bits of butter and bake 15 minutes in a hot oven.

TUNA CUPS
Two cups salmon, 1 cup boiled rice, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon paprika, few gratings nutmeg.

Remove skin and bones from salmon and divide in rather large flakes. Melt butter in a smooth sauce pan, add rice, cover and shake over the fire till thoroughly hot. Season and add fish. Lift very gently and cook five minutes to heat the salmon. Serve poled on a hot dish.

TUNA FISH WITH EGGS
Four eggs, 1 cup tuna fish, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons milk, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon pepper, hot buttered toast.

Beat eggs slightly with milk. Season with salt and pepper. Melt butter in sauce pan and add the tuna fish broken in flakes. When very hot add the eggs. Cook slowly and stir with a silver fork constantly. Lift the mixture rather than stir it and be round in the pan.

When the whole begins to thicken remove from the fire and serve on hot buttered toast.

CURRY OF SALMON
One large can salmon, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 dessertspoon curry powder, 1 dessertspoon flour, 1 sour apple, 1 small onion, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1 cup water, 1 teaspoon anchovy or bloncher paste, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 butter and fry onion (sliced)

PHYSICIAN HELPS CHEF PLAN FIRST SCIENTIFIC DIET

Chief Cook at Waldorf Astoria Has Scientific Menus for His Guests

By Sister Mary
New York—Are you too fat? Are you too thin? Must you eat certain things prepared just so?

Rene Anjard, chef of the Waldorf Astoria hotel, has, with the aid of a medical consultant on nutritional disorders, worked out the first scientific diet service to be established in an American hotel.

This dietetic service contains seven diet menus all worked out for breakfast, luncheon and dinner.

PREPARATION SIMPLE
Monsieur Anjard says that the foods on all these menus are prepared in the simplest manner possible.

Suppose you are a bit fleshy for the prevailing styles. Menu number two should be your guide.

For breakfast you may choose an orange, unsweetened stewed prunes or pears, baked or raw apple, or grapes.

Your cereal may be any coarse breakfast food served with cream, but without sugar.

Bread may be bran muffins or toasted gluten bread.

You may have eggs—boiled, poached or scrambled. Or perhaps a broiled lamb or mutton chop or even a broiled chicken.

The beverages are a serious matter; tea (no cream or sugar) coffee (no cream or sugar), or hot skimmed milk.

The meats for any menu are broiled, boiled or roasted, and served without rich gravies or highly seasoned stuffings.

The vegetables are served plain boiled, mostly seasoned with only salt.

A VETERAN CHIEF
The salads are plain greens with French dressing.

The desserts are custards, or ice cream, tapioca or rice pudding, or fresh or stewed fruits. No sugar is used in the custard or ice cream.

Rene Anjard has been chef at the Waldorf for 26 years. He has "cheffed" for more celebrities than any other man in New York city.

"Most famous men and women eat very simply," he said.

"To make travelers comfortable is a great thing and worthy of much effort."

without browning. Mix curry powder with flour and add to butter. Cook, stirring constantly for 15 minutes. Add water, apples coarsely chopped, and salt and simmer for half an hour. Strain, add lemon juice, anchovy paste.

Cook two or three minutes and add the fish separated in large flakes. When perfectly hot pour into a border of hot boiled rice.

Polly and Paul--and Paris

Chapter 44—Fun Crescendo-Diminuendo

BY ZOB BECKLEY

Under the bubbling fun of the whole thing, Polly's shyness vanished. As "Queen," her part required only grace and the favor of her smile, and she soon found herself entering into the merry spirit with the best of them.

Suddenly the "King" rose in all the majesty of his tablecloth robe, his brass kettle helmet, and waved his scepter which had started life as a breadstick.

"Ho, my subjects!" he boomed. "I desire minstrels from all corners of the earth to sing before my Queen. I command bards, and those who dance with skillful feet! Come, Ladies, of the new-hatched Republic of Georgia, give us your famous tzevqa."

"Barry, succeed the name of the dance, and mid the shouts of the company, a little slim man with blue-black hair and eyebrows that made a straight line across his face, sprang forward and spun round and round like a top.

Checking himself suddenly, he began his strange steps, first slowly, then gradually speeding into dazzling leaps and rushes, punctuated with cries of "Huss! H-s-s!" that stirred the crowd to wild applause. Ending with a wonderful leap in the air, feet twinkling, "hair a-wave," he brought up before the royal couple, bowing till his forehead touched the floor.

He was followed by a tall, slender fellow with great eyes and longish dark hair—a Persian sculptor, born in poverty, who as a lad had tended herds on the barren mountain sides. They turned. No one. * * *

"Go on, go on," nudged Norma, who had not relaxed her role of engineer-in-chief of Polly's evening. "I'll see to Violet! She's got cavaliers enough anyhow—she never lacks."

"Where are we going?" Polly asked. "Isn't that truly American!" put in Barry. "She must have a program! Let's let our mood guide us—come, forward, march!"

They walked on, unheeding. Then they somehow realized that no footsteps were coming in their wake. They turned. No one. * * * halloed. In vain. * * * Only the echoes of their own voices answered them, resounding through the silent street.

Household Hints

SMART SHOES

English women are again wearing suede shoes. The three-strap model with a twinkling jewel on each strap is the really smart style.

FANS

Last year we had the mask fan. This year the smartest fans that are shown are very large. Some which one sees at the theaters and smart eating places must be quite three feet across.

COLORS

When Paris really sets about shedding all of her black for colors, that color, according to smart designers, will be brown, shading from putty to deepest mahogany. Models in bronze, cinnamon and golden brown crepe are already being shown.

GLOVES

Putty colored gauntlet gloves are considered quite the smartest thing for spring wear with black coat frocks, especially if the frock is of velvet.

BRAID TRIMMINGS

Paris is trimming her new tailored gowns with an abundance of narrow braid.

echoes of their own voices answered them, resounding through the silent street.

SPARE TIME JOBS FOR FATHER

When enamel pans or kettles crack, or get a hole in them, you can fix them up in a simple way. Take putty, sifted coal ashes and a few drops of oil. Make this into a stiff paste and fill the hole or crack. Then fill the pan or kettle with water and set on the back of the range to harden.

IF YOU ARE WELL BRED

You will not, when leaving a dance early, disturb your hostess to make your adieux, is she is busy.

You will always treat a chaperon as the guest of honor. You will never refuse a wedding invitation without excellent reason.

A REVIVAL

With many of the new tailored suits one sees bright red leather purses made in felt envelope style with a wide band at the side through which the hand may be slipped.

Sisters in beauty

Two pretty girls, sharing the same beauty secret, although one lived 3,000 years ago. Girls who both know that a fresh, smooth, radiant skin is not only woman's greatest charm, but one within the reach of every woman.

For pretty girls used Palmolive in the days of ancient Egypt, just as they do today. The crude combination of palm and olive oils which served as beautifying cleanser was the inspiration of the familiar Palmolive cake, famous for its mildness the world over.

Modern science, with all its progress, can find no milder, more soothing cleansers than these two ancient oils. It can only perfect their combination and offer it in the most efficient and convenient form.

Gives a perfect skin

To state that just washing your face every day will give you that all-desired, fresh, smooth skin may sound too simple to be true. But such cleanliness is the foundation of complexion beauty, for this reason:

The accumulations of dirt, oil and perspiration, cold cream and powder must be removed or they will collect and clog the tiny pores which compose the surface of the skin.

Such clogging enlarges, which soon results in coarse texture, and the imbedded dirt causes blackheads, and when it carries infection, eruptions follow.

There is no beauty in such a neglected skin, which repels when it should attract, and prevents popularity and social success.

Soothes while it cleanses

Some women will complain that soap is too harsh, that it ages and dries their skins. This proves they are using the wrong soap.

The smooth, creamy lather of Palmolive soothes while it cleanses. It removes every trace of injurious dirt and skin accumulations and secretions, leaving the face becomingly soft and smooth, with radiant freshness and natural color.

The use of cosmetics isn't harmful if the basis is a skin that is thoroughly, healthfully clean. In case of dryness, apply your favorite cold cream both before and after washing.

Not for face alone

Don't forget that your neck and throat are also conspicuous for skin beauty or the lack of it, and that this is where age first shows.

SEEK FUNDS FOR OLYMPIC CONTEST

Start Early to Gather Money to Pay Way of Athletes to Paris Games

By Henry L. Farrell
New York.—When 1924 rolls around, the American Olympic Association probably will not have to go out on the corners with dark spectacles and a tin cup.

Profiting by the lessons of 1920, the association is starting now to gather funds to pay the way of the American standard bearers to France for the next Paris games.

Several thousand dollars are already in the fund and in two years more enough cash ought to be on hand to enable the association to give the athletes something better than they had for their journey to Antwerp.

It was the idea of the Boston Athletic Association to donate five per cent of the receipts of all their games between now and 1924 to the Olympic fund. The first "cut" of their recent indoor games amounted to $1,000.

The Milwaukee Athletic Club, which consists of employees of the John Wanamaker store, also has agreed to give five per cent of the receipts of all its games.

The New York Athletic Club always has been a generous contributor to the fund, giving a big appropriation out of the club's treasury as well as paying the expenses of all the club members who make the team.

Other clubs are expected to fall in line, so that the Olympic organization will not be forced to ask the public to foot the bills.

Plans for the 1924 team, of course, are not very definite at this time, but the committee already has made a wise decision in arriving at the conclusion to make the next team much smaller than it has been in the past.

The expenses not only will be much less, but the coaches and trainers will be able to achieve better results when they have a smaller number of men to instruct.

A batter, after hitting the ball for a single, overruns first base. He then turns to his left about a yard inside of the foul line on fair territory and returned to first base. He is reaching first base, after the ball, running it, he is touched with the ball by the first baseman. After turning on fair territory the runner made no attempt to go to second, but came directly back to first. Is he out or safe?

BOXING SHOW IS CALLED OFF BY STATE OFFICERS

Tieup of Trains Prevents Contracts From Reaching Madison on Time

The boxing show scheduled for Armory G Thursday evening, March 2 was called off at noon Tuesday when Elmer Johnston, promoter for the Mid-West Athletic club was notified by the Wisconsin Boxing commission that contracts of the fighters did not arrive in Madison five days ahead of the show as required by law.

Mr. Johnston explained that the failure of the contracts to arrive on time was due entirely to the fact that train service from the Fox river valley had been cut off and that they were in the mails in plenty of time but, the commission would not accept the reason and ordered the show cancelled.

No date has been fixed for the postponed show. Mr. Johnston has wired the principals to learn a date that will be satisfactory and expects to be able to announce the new time within a few days.

SPORT VIEWS AND NEWS

George Hill, Appleton heavyweight wrestler, is anxious to go into action again against a worthy opponent and has asked Elmer Johnston, matchmaker for the Mid-West Athletic club, to bring one of the top-notchers of the game here to meet him. Hill is training every day to keep in condition and will be ready to wrestle on a few days notice. Mr. Johnston is arranging a wrestling card he expects to stage in Armory G early in March in which Hill will probably meet Savage, Chicago heavyweight.

Boxing shows will be staged in Appleton every month if the fans give evidence that they want the ring game by turning out for the program of bouts in Armory G. Thursday night, Elmer Johnston plans to bring top-notchers of the squared circle here for the main-events and give local boys and boxers from surrounding territory chances to perform in the preliminaries.

Two heavyweight battles on the calendar for March will go a long way toward finding an opponent for Jack Dempsey. One brings Harry Wills against Kid Norfolk and the other is between Harry Greb and Tom Gibbons. Wills and Norfolk will meet Thursday night in New York. Wills was once considered the logical opponent for Dempsey but his indifferent showings against Tate and Langford have lowered his stock considerably. If he is able to beat Norfolk decisively he will again take top place among championship contenders and may be entitled to a fight for the world's heavyweight crown. The winner of the Greb-Gibbons fight to be staged in New York on March 13, actually has been assured a contest with Dempsey. These scrappers are the best of the contenders among white heavyweights and their battle will bring forth the legitimate white contender for the title.

Benny Leonard is ducking a battle with Charley White, the Chicago hard-hitting lightweight contender. Benny is around polishing off a few set-ups but wants no arguments at present with boys like White. Leonard was out of the ring for several months and intends to fight himself back into shape before he tackles the fast men in his division. He had a hard time getting started against Rocky Kansas and if he had been meeting a clever man the night he fought Kansas he might have lost his title. Leonard is not a boxer that side steps the best men in his division and as soon as he is sure that he is right again—that his judge of distance is perfect, his blows have their old steam and his legs are able to get him around the ring with speed—he will be ready for White or any other man in the lightweight ranks.

Word is going around that Stanislaus Zhyezko, heavyweight wrestling king, will retire from the ring in a few months. Stanislaus is matched to meet Yusuf Mahmoud in Kansas City this month and negotiations are underway for him to wrestle Martin Plustine. If he wins these matches he plans to turn over the heavy weight crown to his brother Waldek who defeated Stecher in New York last week.

Pittsburg is going to be none too strong behind the bat, if Catcher Schmidt makes good his threat not to return. It is also possible that he may figure in a trade that will work to the advantage of the Pirates.

While waiting for the train in the Washington station a couple of Gypsy fortune tellers tried to induce some of the athletes to let them dope out their future by reading their palms.

Naturally the players had the gypsy queens concentrate on Nick. On of the bush league players yelled: "Come on, Nick, loosen up with a quarter, and let the lady tell your future."

"Young man," replied Nick, "my future is behind me, and with it a lot of lost quarters."

"Rip" Collins, who was secured by Boston from New York, isn't making any fuss because he's been let out by a club that appears to have a fine chance to repeat in the American League. "Any place is home to me just so long as I get the money and a chance to pitch. I didn't get much of the latter while with New York," says "Rip."

APPLETON PLAYS MANITOWOC FIVE

Orange and Blue Tossers in Final Home Contest Saturday Night

With every man on the squad in top shape following the hard game with Oshkosh preps last Saturday night Appleton high school cagers started practice Monday afternoon for the game with Manitowoc high school Saturday night in Alexander gymnasium. The contest will be the final home appearance of the season for the Orange and Blue and the last game on the high school regular schedule. Following Saturday's struggle Coach Vincent will start preparing his athletics for the sectional tournament to be staged in the Oshkosh Normal gymnasium next month.

The Orange and Blue mentor does not expect a stiff battle from the Manitowoc five. The Appleton cagers defeated Manitowoc by a top heavy score early in the season. Coach Vincent intends, however, to drive his men hard to keep them in condition and there will be no letup in the training grind until after the tournament.

Appleton has hit its stride again after performing below form against Fond du Lac and Neenan and Orange and Blue supporters expect the quintet to make a strong bid for sectional honors in the Oshkosh Normal tournament.

LAWRENCE TEAM IDLE THIS WEEK

Blue and White Quintet Plays Carroll Five One Week From Friday

Lawrence college cagers have no game scheduled for this week but Coach H. D. McChesney is sending the men through workouts daily to keep them in shape for the hard grind that will start again next week in preparation for the struggle with the Carroll college tossers on the Carroll floor one week from Friday night.

The Blue and White was scheduled to meet Ripon last Friday night in Ripon but the game was postponed when the Lawrence athletes were forced to stay home on account of the railroad tieup. No date has been set to play off, the postponed contest.

Edward Maurer was in Green Bay on business Monday.
